12. As Defendant has been previously informed, infringement occurs as follows:

856 Ship Notice/Manifest

This is NEED SUPPLY COMPANY’S ship notice/manifest, sometimes referred to as the Advanced Shipment Notice (ASN), or the 856 EDI document. The original term “advance ship notice” was a bit of a misnomer as it implied that the document was sent in advance of the shipment; however, this is not always a recommended or followed procedure. The ship notice/manifest is transmitted at the same time as the physical shipment and it details all of the items being shipped by product ID (UPC code or otherwise) and its corresponding carton and/or pallet.

The ship notice/manifest is in use by most major companies including retailers such as NEED SUPPLY COMPANY which is only one of the reasons why so many notable traditional and online retailers are already licensees of Shipping and Transit. For retailers with distribution centers, the document is received typically while the physical shipment is still in route. The ship notice gives the retailer advance warning so that they can schedule the receipt at the distribution center and also so that they are alerted to any shortages in the shipment. Once the shipment arrives, the ship notice is then a tool for automatically checking in the cartons by scanning the attached UCC-128 label. This verifies the receipt of the cartons and provides information of any cartons lost in shipping. This in turn allows the company to alert the customer/user of products, which will be, or have been, shipped to them.

Message timing and activation of impending arrival messages to users can be set at the start of the route or day, or in some cases one or more days before the vehicle is to arrive. By sending impending arrival messages early, users can rearrange their schedules for meeting a delivery vehicle/driver when he arrives. This highlights that the activation may occur at the pick up location (start of the route) and could happen one or more days in advance.

COUNT I

13. Plaintiff realleges Paragraphs 1 – 6, 11 and 12, as fully and completely as if set forth verbatim herein.

14. Beginning on or after July 2, 2002, and within the six years preceding the filing of this Complaint, Defendant has directly infringed at least one claim of U.S. Patent No. 6,415,207 by the activities referred to in this Complaint in violation of 35 U.S.C. § 271(a).

A user at a computer system elects to purchase an item and enters an email address. The online store website explains by purchasing they will be provided "order confirmation" and more importantly "shipment confirmation" by selecting to purchase from their website. Please note: Once you enter an email address and establish a password, our system will remember that relationship even if you don't place an order. If this is your first time ordering with us but you've previously entered an email address and password, you may want to try signing in as a "Registered Customer." After entering your email address and password, click "Continue New Account Setup" and follow the steps to enter your shipping information and payment information.
means for communicating with a remote communication device, said means for communicating including a means for receiving caller identification information automatically transmitted to said communicating means;	NEED SUPPLY COMPANY'S customers setup accounts and enter email address and other contact information. When the customer enters email and account information on the NEED SUPPLY COMPANY website, the website places information on the customer's computer for automatically identifying this customer, when this customer returns to the NEED SUPPLY COMPANY website. This information that identifies the customer to the NEED SUPPLY COMPANY website is known as browser cookies or tracking cookies, cookies are small, often encrypted text files, located in browser directories. They are used by NEED SUPPLY COMPANY to

	help customer automatically log in or particularly log in and navigate their websites efficiently and perform certain functions. Cookies may also be created when a user's browser loads the NEED SUPPLY COMPANY website. The website sends information to the browser which then creates a text file. Every time the user goes back to the NEED SUPPLY COMPANY website, the browser retrieves and sends this file to the website's server. Computer Cookies are created not just by the website the user is browsing but also by other websites that run ads, widgets, or other elements on the page being loaded.
means for utilizing said caller identification information to automatically search for and locate a set of said status information; and	The NEED SUPPLY COMPANY website utilizes the customer identification information to log users into their own account information. Auto-populated email fields are generated and entered into the account log in fields. After the user is automatically identified, they are (a.) automatically logged in or (b.) email addresses are automatically filled in and customers may search for and locate vehicle and shipment status information. Links within email confirmations and notifications provide customers with their own account information. The same and other links provide product and shipment information.
means for automatically retrieving and transmitting said set of said status information.	NEED SUPPLY COMPANY customers are automatically logged into their account and this automatic log in retrieves and transmits vehicle and shipment status information (i.e. users are not required to enter account in whole or in part, information).
7. The system of claim 5, wherein said caller identification information is an e-mail address.	The user/purchaser/package recipient enters an email address. “At some point, a user identifier identifying the user is correlated with entry. For example, during a registration period, the user may provide his or her telephone number, which is stored in the database 72 and correlated with the entry in the database 72 associated with the vehicle 17. However, it should be noted that other types of user identifiers may be used. For example, the user identifier may be the user's name, the user's home or business address, the user's e-mail address, or other types of values that identify the user.”

16. In architecture, the system of the present invention utilizes a database, a communication interface, and a system manager. The database stores status information associated with a vehicle [shipment was picked up by vehicle] or [shipment is in route] or [shipment was delivered], and the communication interface is designed to communicate with communication devices remotely located from the system. The system manager receives a message transmitted from the vehicle and updates the status information stored in the database based on the received message [when shipments are scanned into the vehicle, this information updates the shipment records/database]. When a remote communication device establishes communication with the communication interface, the communication interface receives caller identification information automatically transmitted to the communication interface. The system manager analyzes this caller identification information and automatically retrieves status information from the database based on the caller identification information. The system manager then transmits, via the communication interface, the retrieved status information to the remote communication device. (See, generally, Col. 1, line 66 through Col. 2, line 16 of the ‘207 Patent.)
